April 2022 Newsletter

In an attempt to have in person meetings and hear the auctioneer we are pleased to be able to move back to our Fulton County Library meeting location for some First Monday meetings. These meetings will have to start at 6:00 because the library has a firm close at 8:00 on Monday. We will discuss at the April 4 meeting whether we want to continue to use Manuel's for the dates the library is not available due to being an early voting location.

We will continue our Third MONDAY as a "virtual" Atlanta Stamp Collector's Club meeting hosted by member Lloyd Nutter. Lloyd sends out a Zoom invitation a couple days before the meeting. If you do not get an invitation for the meetings, please contact Lloyd to make sure he adds you to his list. Emailing him: trains56@charter.net. Also, if you need to test how Zoom works, Lloyd will be glad to give you a test.

BUILDING VICTORIAN POST OFFICES

THE CONTINUING ADVENTURES OF SIR HENRY TANNER

By Colin Clark

Architecture starts when you carefully put two bricks together. There it begins.

– Ludwig Mies van der Rohe (1886 – 1969)

Sir Henry Tanner designed and built both Edwardian and Victorian post offices, and his Edwardian adventures were described in a previous article (Sunderland Post Office). It is his Victorian adventures that are chronicled here.

The Victorian Era:

Once upon a time, the Victorians had a tradition of building remarkable post office buildings, which were not just utilitarian, but also beautiful.

During the Victorian era, the British Post Office was not responsible for the design and construction of its own buildings. Rather, it was the architects working within the Office of Works (1851 – 1940), and then subsequent government ministries who carried out this work.¹ The post office architects were civil servants, so often very little is known about them. However thanks to surviving archive documentation, there is now some idea of who these architects were.

One such architect was Sir Henry Tanner (1849 – 1935). He was a Fellow of the Royal Institute of British Architects (F.R.I.B.A.).

In 1898, he took over as the Principal Surveyor of the London Office of Works. He utilized a variety of architectural styles for various projects, but his normal style was that of French Renaissance. One example of his post office architectural design work was in the city of North Shields (the details are described below).

The Office of Works was given its separate identity in 1851, derived from its precursor incarnation as the Office of Woods, Forests, Land Revenues, Works and Buildings. This refocusing of the department was legislated in order to bring the Office of Works under the direct control of the British Parliament.

Post Office Case Study: NORTH SHIELDS

This post office case study is of North Shields.

LOCATION:

North Shields is located on the coastline of the North East of England, on the River Tyne, at Tynemouth.

The street map below indicates the street location of the General Post Office: G.P.O. (63 Saville Street), circled in BLUE:

An example of a local postal history marking is shown below:

POST OFFICE DESCRIPTION:

The North Shields Post Office was opened on the 3rd February 1890, and it still stands today. It is currently being used for office accommodation. The photograph opposite (Figure 5) shows an archival photograph of the building.

The detailed photograph below (Figure 6) shows the wording on the post office façade (POST OFFICE VR):

The contemporary photograph below (Figure 7) shows the building as it stands today. The wording on the façade has been removed, and it is not known when that was done.

LOCAL HISTORY:

North Shields has its roots in the founding of Tynemouth Priory in the 7th century A.D.

North Shields is first recorded in 1225, when the Prior of Tynemouth, Germanus, decided to create a fishing port to provide fish for the Priory which was situated on the headland at the mouth of the River Tyne.

The name of North Shields derives from Middle English schele, which means “temporary sheds or huts used by fishermen”.

NOTE: The façade for the North Shields Post Office contains the Royal Cypher for Queen Victoria (VR): representing VICTORIA REGINA.

Versions of the Royal Cypher are also used on Royal Mail post boxes.³ Today, the EIIR cypher stands for Elizabeth II Regina. The R was added to a monarch’s cypher from the reign of Henry VIII, and stands for either Rex or Regina, which is Latin for King or Queen respectively.

CYPHER

CONCLUSION:

As the postal system expanded in the Victorian era, there was an ever increasing demand for post office infrastructure, which required an expanding Office of Works. Sir Henry Tanner was a leading light in that movement.

USING THE STAMP AUCTION TAG

I've included a sheet with 4 Stamp Auction tags on it and will be bringing more copies to our in person meetings if you don't have a way to print them out.

Following is a description from Doug Peavy who designed the form:

Country: Although filling in "country" is usually obvious, if your item was issued by a state, district or municipality make sure to list it.

Year: Fill in the year of issue if you know it. This might assist members in making a decision to bid

Description: Give the bidders as much information as possible about your item, including condition (mint or used, hinged or never hinged) plus any important design features and any other factors you feel the bidders should know.

Catalog #: Indicate the catalog number and which catalog you reference.

CV (Catalog value). Indicate the catalog value and the year of the catalog you used.

Starting Bid: The minimum bid you are willing to accept.

Although not all of these are required, the more information the more likely you will get bids in the auction.
