February 2022 Newsletter

Omicron has changed meeting plans. We will keep the MONDAY meeting but both February meetings will be virtual zoom. We will monitor month by month to try to get back to in person meetings as COVID-19 levels change.

We will be switching our "virtual" meeting to third MONDAY. Hosted by member Lloyd Nutter. Lloyd sends out a Zoom invitation a couple days before the meeting. If you do not get an invitation for the meetings, please contact Lloyd to make sure he adds you to his list. Emailing him: trains56@charter.net. Also, if you need to test how Zoom works, Lloyd will be glad to give you a test.

BUILDING EDWARDIAN POST OFFICES
MONKWEARMOUTH AND

By Colin Clark

Architecture starts when you carefully put two bricks together. There it begins.

– Ludwig Mies van der Rohe (1886 – 1969)

The Edwardians continued the Victorian tradition of building remarkable post office buildings, which were not just utilitarian, but also beautiful.

As with the Victorian era, the British Post Office was not responsible for the design and construction of its own buildings in the Edwardian era. Rather, it was the architects working within the Office of Works (1851 – 1940), and then subsequent government ministries who carried out this work.<sup>1</sup> The post office architects were civil servants, so often very little is known about them. However thanks to surviving archive documentation, there is now some idea of who these architects were.

One such architect was Sir Henry Tanner (1849 – 1935). He was a Fellow of the Royal Institute of British Architects (F.R.I.B.A.).

In 1898, he took over as the Principal Surveyor of the London Office of Works. He utilized a variety of architectural styles for various projects, but his normal style was that of French Renaissance. One example of his post office architectural design work was in the city of Sunderland (the details are described below).

The Office of Works was given its separate identity in 1851, derived from its precursor incarnation as the Office of Woods, Forests, Land Revenues, Works and Buildings. This refocusing of the department was legislated in order to bring the Office of Works under the direct control of the British Parliament.

WORKS HISTORY

Post Office Case Study: Sunderland

This post office case study is of Sunderland, which has the associated numeric allocation of 761.<sup>2,3</sup> Sunderland is located on the coastline of the North East of England, on the River Wear. Sunderland was an industrial port complex with a multitude of railway connections.

The post office building was opened on the 1st of August 1903, and it housed the Post Office, the Telegraph department and the Inland Revenue office. The building still stands and is located in the West Sunnyside area of Sunderland; and today it is currently used for residential apartments. It is a protected British building.

When functioning as the post office, the public lobby in the building had teak-lined walls and was 40 feet (ft) by 25ft in size. Behind the public lobby was the mail sorting room (125ft long by 52ft wide) which was partially lit by glass roofing. The second floor housed the Postmaster's private office and the telegraph engineer's office.<sup>5</sup>

The “POST OFFICE” façade is still located on the side of the building today, as shown above.

Conclusion: As the postal system expanded in the Edwardian era, there was an ever increasing demand for post office infrastructure, which required an expanding Office of Works. Sir Henry Tanner was a leading light in that movement.

There are online Stamp Chat events sponsored by American Philatelic Society using Zoom. You can see the archive of StampChat programs and register for upcoming chats at this link: <https://stamps.org/news/sc/stampchats/p/1>

There were many Stamp Chats recorded once we all locked down and it may be easier for you to access on the APS Presents YouTube channel. There are also Stamp Stories and Behind the Scenes at APS videos. The variety of subjects now available is amazing. <https://www.youtube.com/user/AmericasStampClub> is the link to check out all the programs. Maybe one of our members would like to host a presentation and include one of these videos.
