STAMP OF THE MONTH

An incredibly rare and valuable stamp stolen from a collector in 1955 resurfaced this month at a New York auction house, the AP reports. According to NPR, a printing accident in 1918 resulted in a sheet of 100 "inverted Jenny" stamps featuring an upside-down airplane. They're considered by experts to be the most famous stamps in America, each 24-cent square fetching hundreds of thousands of dollars at auction. In 1955, someone swiped four inverted Jennies from the collection of Ethel Stewart McCoy, whose father was a Dow Jones founder. It is "one of the most notorious crimes in philatelic history," according to an expert.

The postage stamp is a flimsy thing
No thicker than a beetle’s wing,
And yet it will roam the world for you
Exactly where you tell it to.

QUIZ

The first part of this quiz by Lewis Josephs* appeared on the Syracuse Stamp Club page in the September–October 2015 issue of the Stamp Insider. Our thanks to the Stamp Insider for the use of this quiz!

1. Many of the stamps of South Africa were issued in se-tenant pairs, with one stamp in English and the other in the second of South Africa’s official languages. What is that language?

2. When Hong Kong reverted to the People’s Republic of China (PRC), the silhouette of Queen Elizabeth and other indications of British sovereignty were removed from Hong Kong stamps, which were subsequently inscribed “Hong Kong, China.” In what year did this take place?

3. In the Scott catalogue system, what type of stamp is identified with the prefix PR?

4. Canadian collectors avidly seek the sixteen stamps of the beautifully engraved Jubilee Issue celebrating the sixtieth year of Queen Victoria’s reign. In what year was this set issued?

5. In what Latin American country were stamps inscribed “Escuelas” or “Instruccion” valid for postage until 1895?

6. Germany produced two beautifully engraved watermarked souvenir sheets in 1936 to commemorate a global event in Berlin. What was that event?

7. This group of Pacific Islands was a British protectorate from 1900–1970. Its early stamps used a unique watermark of multiple turtles. What is this group of islands?

8. Until 1949 stamps of the Netherlands Antilles were all inscribed with what country name? Hint: This was the largest island in the group.

9. What stamp-issuing entity between Germany and France used German marks from 1920–1947 and French francs from 1947–1959?

10. What indigenous animal is depicted in the watermark of early South African stamps?

11. Between 1912 and 1931, this European country issued what was until then the largest set in stamp history. It contained ninety-two stamps in many denominations and colors and depicted Ceres, the Latin goddess of grain. What was the country?

12. From 1930–1944 Switzerland applied a process to the gum of certain stamp issues to prevent the stamps from curling. This process appears as a faint pattern of tiny squares. What is the technical term for this process?

13. The famous US Overrun Countries issue of 1943–1944 depicts the flags of various Axis-occupied countries. How many countries (stamps) are there in this issue?

14. Syria and Egypt participated in some joint issues between 1958–1961 inscribed UAR. What does UAR stand for?

Carlos Eduardo FINLAY Shine, MD
By Marcos A. Iglesias

Carlos Eduardo Finlay, the son of Carlos J. Finlay was born in Havana, Cuba on July 11, 1868 and died in Havana on March 11, 1944. He completed his elementary studies at the Belen School in Havana. His father then sent him to New York where he earned his degree as a medical doctor at Columbia University, New York, in 1889. He took his postgraduate training at the New York Ophthalmic Institute (1889-1892). Upon his return to Cuba, he obtained a medical degree from the University of Havana.

He became professor in the Faculty of Medicine at the University of Havana and in 1907 he was appointed Professor of Ophthalmology, a position he held until his death in 1944.

Among his accomplishments are: Interim Dean at the Faculty of Medicine, University of Havana (1934-1937); Secretary of Public Health (1938); elected member of the Academy of Medical, Physical and Natural Sciences of Cuba (1906); Member of the American Ophthalmologic Society (1927); Instructor at the College of Physicians and Surgeons (Columbia University); Vice-President of the American Public Health Association (1941) and Honorary Fellow of the Gorgas Society, Louisiana State University Medical School (1936).

He wrote extensively in the field of Ophthalmology and also authored a book about his father's work with yellow fever.

Philatelic Information

Dr. Carlos E. Finlay’s picture is included in the painting by Esteban Valderrama reproduced on a 13¢ stamp issued by the Cuban Postal Administration in 1965 (Scott 995). It depicts the meeting of his father, Dr. Carlos J. Finlay with some members of the Fourth Yellow Fever Commission, in Havana.

Naval career was famed admiral's second choice

By Gerald A. Floyd

What would motivate a young man born in central Texas to aspire to a career in the U.S. Navy? In the case of Chester William Nimitz, the influence was his grandfather, a former seaman in the German merchant marine, who regaled the child with stories of adventure on the high seas.

Nimitz was born in Fredericksburg on February 24, 1885. His frail father died before he was born, leaving his grandfather to help raise him. His mother remarried when he was six, and the family moved to Kerrville. Despite the seafaring heritage, while he was a student at Tivy High School, Nimitz sought to become an Army officer. There were no appointments at West Point available, so Nimitz settled for a lone opening at Annapolis.

During his time at the Naval Academy he excelled in math and graduated with honors, seventh in a class of 114. The Naval Academy year book described Nimitz as “of cheerful yesterdays and confident tomorrows.”

After graduation he was assigned to the U.S.S. Ohio as a midshipman and cruised to the Far East. Two years later he was commissioned ensign and became commander of the gunboat U.S.S. Panay. During his next command of the U.S.S. Decatur he was court-martialed for running her aground on a sand bar. Returning to the United States in 1907 he was ordered to duty in the submarine service. During his duty aboard the submarine E-1 (formerly the U.S.S. Skipjack) he was awarded the Silver Lifesaving Medal for his heroic action in saving W.J. Walsh, fireman second class, U.S.N., from drowning.

Nimitz married Catherine Freeman on April 9, 1913 in Wollaston, Massachusetts. They had four children, Catherine, Chester, Anna and Mary.

During the years of World War I he served in various roles, including the staff of Rear Admiral Samuel S. Robison, Commander, Submarine Force, U.S. Atlantic Fleet. In September 1918 he joined the office of the Chief of Naval Operations.

After the war he continued his career as executive officer of the battleship U.S.S. South Carolina. Later he became commanding officer of the U.S.S. Chicago. In 1922 Nimitz attended the Naval War College and after graduation became Chief of Staff to Commander Battle Forces. He established one of the first naval R.O.T.C. units, at the University of California at Berkley. He returned to sea duty in 1929 as commander of Submarine Division 20.

By 1939 Nimitz was serving as Chief of the Bureau of Navigation in Washington D.C. But just 10 days after the disaster at Pearl Harbor, he was chosen by President Roosevelt to serve as Commander in Chief, Pacific Fleet and Pacific Ocean areas. Later, in 1944 he was promoted to a newly created rank of Fleet Admiral of the United States Navy. On September 2,1945, he represented the United States at the formal surrender of the Japanese aboard the battleship U.S.S. Missouri in Tokyo Bay.

After the war he became Chief of Naval Operations and later a special Assistant to the Secretary of the Navy. He served for eight years as a regent of the University of California. Nimitz helped restore goodwill with Japan by helping raise funds to restore the Battleship Mikasa, Admiral Togo’s flagship at Tsushima in 1905.

Nimitz suffered a stroke in late 1965. Leaving the hospital, he returned to his home in Oakland, California. He died on February 20,1966.

A number of public schools bear Nimitz’s name, but of all the memorials dedicated to him, the most impressive is the National Museum of the Pacific War, a complex that includes the Admiral Nimitz Museum, located in the historic Nimitz Hotel in Fredericksburg, Texas. The Admiral Nimitz Museum details the hometown hero’s personal history from birth through his career in the Navy, while the Museum of the Pacific displays numerous naval artifacts, including a B-25 bomber like those used in James Doolittle’s raid on Japan.

References:

At the conclusion of World War II, Chester W. Nimitz was serving as Fleet Admiral of the United States Navy, the highest rank in that service branch. When the Japanese formally surrendered on September 2,1945 aboard the U.S.S. Missouri in Tokyo Bay, Nimitz signed for the United States.
